Smoother Land Development Process

Bob Turner, NAR Commercial Liaison, and Kathy McQuilkin, NAR Land Use Committee Chair, talk about a big win on the environmental front when the federal government released a proposed rule to replace existing rules on developing properties with bodies of water on them. Nick D'Ambrosia, a senior vice president with Long & Foster in Virginia, Maryland, and other mid-Atlantic states, talks about NAR's meeting with the FBI in December on wire fraud in real estate. These and other news segments are in the latest Voice for Real Estate video.

Goal of Many DIY Projects: Livability

Millennials like undertaking home remodeling projects themselves more than previous generations, and they mainly do projects that increase the functionality or livability of their house, an NAR survey finds. Details in Remodeling Impact Report: DIY.

Commitment to Excellence

The Commitment to Excellence \(C2EX\) program was created by REALTORS® as a way to promote professionalism in the real estate industry. It gives members an advantage in an increasingly competitive market, and shows consumers that REALTORS® are committed to conducting business that meets the highest standards.

How to Work with Appraisers

NAR's latest Window to the Law video helps members understand what they can and shouldn't say when working with appraisers.

Shutdown Affecting Real Estate

An NAR survey finds 22% of members have had a transaction affected by the partial federal government shutdown, mainly through mortgage processing delays, NAR Chief Economist Lawrence Yun says. He and an NAR regulatory analyst talk about the impact of a prolonged shutdown on real estate in a short video.
